This fully online, asynchronous course is designed to explore behavioral health as an enterprising entity. While behavioral health traditionally focuses on contributions to mental wellness, including substances and their abuse, emotions, and other external forces, MHS 6097 seeks to expand future professionals' understanding of the field by introducing finance as a critical factor in the realization of a viable behavioral health system.

By understanding funding within the behavioral health care infrastructure, students can not only utilize knowledge from the course to improve quality
